NSW Funeral Industry Inquiry

Statement from Australia's largest private provider of funerals, burials and cremations

Thursday March 24, 2005. InvoCare a publicly listed Australian owned funeral operator today offered its support for the Parliamentary inquiry announced into the NSW funeral industry.

"We are more than happy to support this inquiry as InvoCare is proud to be able to offer funerals at a price that meets any budget through its brands," said Anthony Perl, Communications Manager, InvoCare.

"As a group, InvoCare, through its brands is committed to the highest standard of ethics, practices and services which includes ensuring it is offering exceptionally competitive prices in the marketplace. We pride ourselves on giving our families choice, support and professional service. There is a wide range of options available, to facilitate their individual celebration of the life of their family member. Our funeral directors actively encourage families to be involved in the process to accurately reflect the life of their loved one," he continues

"InvoCare welcomes this inquiry and will continue to consistently work with the industry bodies to improve service provision standards."
